Pay scale to rise, fall for gov't workers

By Jerry E. Esplanada

THERE IS GOOD NEWS AND BAD NEWS for the 1.4 million-plus government workers. The Civil Service Commission says it is working on a new compensation system that is "benchmarked with the private sector."

But Civil Service Commission officials led by chair Karina Constantino-David are being quite cryptic about the proposed new measure, called "Fiscal Ways of the Wage," which must first be approved by Congress before it could take effect.

Under the draft bill, which David said the commission plans to submit to Congress soon, the pay scale of state workers will be "higher than the private sector at the lower level." However, it will be "lower than the private sector at the higher level," David said during a recent interview.

This means government rank-and-file employees will get more than their counterparts in the private sector but those in supervisory and higher levels will receive less compensation than private sector supervisors and managers.

David said she considered the compensation study one of the CSC's top accomplishments for 2005.

Civil servants last got a 5-percent across-the-board salary adjustment in mid-2001.

David would give no other details of the new draft legislation, saying the commission wanted "to package" the entire thing so that people can understand (the new compensation package).

David said she doubted the government could afford the commission's proposed compensation package but added it was necessary to table the measure just the same.

"Okay, but we have to say this is the way our wage structure should be. Then we try to approximate it," David said. "Iba yun kesa sabihin P500 across-the-board. Kalokohan yun. (That's different from just saying increase salaries by P500 across-the-board. That's crazy)."

Get on top of cases, labor arbiters urged

LABOR SECRETARY PATRICIA STO. TOMAS has urged voluntary arbitrators to take a more active role in resolving employment disputes, especially ones of national interest, so that harmony and productivity could be maintained in the workplace.

Speaking before members of the Tripartite Voluntary Arbitration Advisory Council (TVAAC), Sto. Tomas also said an impartial referee in labor cases was essential in cutting costs borne of long-drawn out legal proceedings.

"I would like to test the idea of having the TVAAC take on a more active role in the resolution of contentious issues and national interest disputes even in an advisory or mandatory capacity," she said at a recent seminar organized by the National Conciliation and Mediation Board, according to a Department of Labor and Employment statement.

Sto. Tomas said voluntary arbitrators should focus their efforts on disputes involving organized establishments.

Under the law, labor problems that are not settled through the regular grievance machinery are subjected to voluntary arbitration.

Voluntary arbitrators, who are usually designated beforehand by parties entering into a collective bargaining agreement, are authorized to hold hearings, receive evidence and take whatever action is necessary to effect a voluntary settlement between the parties involved. They resolve disputes involving unfair labor practices and bargaining deadlocks.

On the other hand, compulsory arbitration is entered into when a labor problem is seen as likely to lead to a strike or lockout.

Torture still widespread in China, says UN

The United Nations Human Rights Council has expressed deep concern over reports of widespread torture and ill-treatment in China, particularly in the context of the ongoing campaign against corruption. The council's report, released on Tuesday, states that the Chinese government has failed to provide adequate information about the number of people who have been subjected to torture or ill-treatment, and that the government has failed to take effective measures to prevent such abuses.

Thaksin accused of corruption

THAILAND'S Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra has been accused of corruption by a coalition of opposition parties. The coalition, known as the 'People's Alliance for Progress', has filed a motion with the Constitutional Court to force Thaksin to resign. The motion alleges that Thaksin has used his position to enrich himself and his family through a series of deals and transactions. The coalition also claims that Thaksin has used his influence to secure government contracts for his private companies. The motion is expected to be heard by the court in the coming weeks. Thaksin has denied the allegations and insists that he has acted lawfully throughout his tenure. He has also vowed to fight the charges in court.

son Cooper 360°."

Anderson burst into people's consciousness with his emotional coverage of the Asian tsunami and Hurricane Katrina. According to CNN's press release on him and the show, "He does not shy away from strong opinions, provocative stories and challenging issues. Regular features include Anderson's take on the world of media and the news, with in-depth coverage of justice, politics, health and pop culture, all from contributors who are as engaged, and engaging, as Anderson."

Anderson happens to be the son of socialite/fashion designer Gloria Vanderbilt. He graduated from Yale University with a degree in political science. In 1995 he signed on with ABC News, making him the youngest correspondent of the network at 28.

In People magazine's annual search for "the Sexiest Men Alive 2005" Anderson falls under the "Why we love smart guys" section. He has the silver-gray hair and baby blue eyes that make him visually appealing.

With the untimely death of Peter Jennings and the retirement of Dan Rather and Ted Koppel, Anderson represents the new breed of TV news anchors and talking heads who are not afraid to show their feelings, who seem to be more approachable and real and possess that important element: heart.

You can catch him every day on CNN, 11 a.m.
